Some years ago, Gore Vidal hit upon the idea that one man, given a long enough life, opportunity to travel, and a knack for being in the right place at the right time, could have met face to face with Zoroaster, Socrates, the Buddha and Confucius. Vidal decided to create that man, and Creation is the result.. It may be the most panoramic historical novel ever written.

Creation.html - Steven Saylor

What, if anything, is Gore Vidal up to in this long, stylish, densely busy but totally undramatic novel of the Persian Empire, circa 520-445 B.C.? Occasionally he seems to be interested in presenting shrewd alternative versions of textbook history (particularly the Greek-Persian wars), the sort of dusted-off, backroom politics he managed quite well in his American historicals (Burr, 1876).
